.... Elder H. J. Capman

AT LOCAL CHURCH MAY 17

Elder H. J. Capman, newly-elected president of the Potomac Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, will be the speaker at a district meeting held in the Seventh-day Adventist church here in Appomattox, May 17, at the eleven o'clock worship service. Following the morning services Elder Capman will drive to the Guinea Mills Seventh-day Adventist church on Highway 15, about 9 miles north of Farmville, where he will lead out in the organizing of that church group.

Visitors are especially invited to this occasion, and are always welcome to all religious services, W. P. Lawrence, the local pastor, said.

Minority Report

Lesson for May 18, 1958

"SUCH popularity must be deserved." "Fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong." "The voice of the people is the voice of God." They aren't necessarily so, such slogans as these. Popularity may be no more than the effect of clever but dishonest advertising. Fifty million Frenchmen, or Americans or whatever you can be and sometimes have been as wrong as sin. The voice of the people can be the voice of the devil. To be sure, the majority may be right some of the time, even most of the time. But it is no infallible guide, and it's a wise man that knows when the minority report is the right one.

Dr. Foreman

God's Examination Day

Indeed, the ability to detect the truth, even when it is in a minority report, has sometimes been God's way of sifting, of testing, his people. There is an interesting Old Testament story which tells of one of these examination days of God sets for men now and then. The people of Israel, set free from Egypt, had been in the wilderness a little over a year. They had been given the Law, they had what we would call an organized church, they had a military organization All was set now for the actual march into Canaan, the promised land. Under God's inspiration, Moses takes precautions first. He sends twelve leading men in to "spy out the land," perhaps the first "intelligence" section of any army recorded in history. They stayed in Canaan for nearly six weeks, without any secrecy. (Passing as Egyptians they would attract no attention in the Canaan of that era.) They came back with one unanimous report: Canaan was a country well worth the conquest, and the conquest would not be easy. At that point the unanimity stopped. The tricky part of any report is the recommendations. The majority recommended: Don't attempt to enter Canaan. Too much fighting, certain defeat. A little minority of two, two against ten, recommended: We can do it by God's help, if we will; so let it be done! Choosing between those two reports was God's examination for the whole people—and they failed. For they thought the majority report was right.

The Wisdom of Faith

A majority report nearly always sounds right, and this one did. It was a shrewd analysis of an obvious risky situation. But it was wrong. For the minority report brought in by Joshua and Caleb had a different kind of wisdom, the wisdom of faith. Now it takes faith to see the wisdom of faith; and that is why, to those without it, faith so often looks like sheer foolishness and even idiocy. It is a test of faith, to begin with, to see that a minority can ever be right. Left to our natural selves, we make wisdom a matter of arithmetic, right and wrong a matter of counting noses. We wait, before making up our minds, till we see which way the bandwagon is headed, and then we jump aboard. True faith asks first, What is right? What does God say? and not What do people say? What does the biggest crowd think?

Goading God In

The wisdom of faith, now in our times as in the time of Joshua, has confidence enough in God always to count him in. Most Americans believe in God, so the polls say. But most Americans make plans, large or small, without any thought of God, precisely as if he did not exist. That majority report of the ten timid spies never mentioned God at all. Maybe they just forgot him entirely. Maybe they thought he had worn himself out getting the people out of Egypt. Anyway, their plans and recommendations had no room for him. The minority report, with the wisdom of faith, included five little words (in our English translation) that made all the difference: "The LORD is with us." The people could not believe that . . . and so they died without ever setting foot on Canaan's soil. It takes faith to count God in to your plans and your hopes. It takes faith to believe that what God wants done, can be done. The test of faith is not the sure thing, the project that can't miss. The test of faith is not the bright day but the dark one. Jesus himself once spoke of a time when men would faint with fear and foreboding of what is coming on the world. Then, he said, then, lift up your heads!

Health and Beauty

Most of us will be spending some time this summer on a beach. This can be fine for the nerves, but quite hard on the complexion.

If you would avoid a beachcomber's complexion, it will be necessary for you to expose yourself to Sol's rays very gradually. Start with fifteen minutes the first day, twenty the next, thirty the next. From then on you must use your own judgment as to exposure. Use a good suntan lotion. It should be applied before swimming, and at once after.

If you have a dry skin, you will want to coddle it with a moisturizing cream and one one of a number of soothing lotions on the markets. A person with really thin, fair skin, would do well to wear a protective lotion under their make-up during the daylight hours.

You may not be planning a beach vacation, but hate the white, white look during the summer, when all your friends have a glowing tan. If this is your problem, you can simulate a tan by using a very deep shade of liquid foundation. Apply it with a cotton pad, smooth it with fingertips, and don't forget your neck and shoulders.

There is a deep amber-colored liquid on the market, "bronze Glo," that will fool even your closest friend. It is perfect for blending in strap marks when you step out in your low-cut formal.

To help tone down that inevitable "red-as-a-beet" look that goes along with the first few days of a beach vacation, try a light dusting of a new powder perfected just for this condition. The powder has a slightly greenish tint, and does a wonderful job.
